The time is come when Greekdom must be viewed objectively, must have proved its coc-not only to the campus itself, but to those in the world outside who contribute the wealth which makes that campus possible.

No one, surely, who has been awake to the times can deny that such a lact exists. For sevcral years, much of the press of the nation has devoted a great deal of its space to discussion. pro and con, of fraternities and their lot. At least three magazines of national circulation have carried articles, picturing and describing every phase of fraternity life, from rush week to hell week, from songfests to cups. Some have landed, some have damned, but whatever their collective conclusion, they have served the purpose of putting "the frats" squarely before the public, to be judged on their own merits and nothing clse.

One occasionally hears talk about the fraternity system "dying out." Nothing, however, could be more untrue; a glance at the record will show that there are now more individual chapters in the country than ever before, and a larger active membership. It is hardly, then, a question of numerical and monetary strength.

The issue, as placed before the public by the press, seems rather to be one of "Is the frater nity system today justifying its existence, or is it merely a hollow shell of a thing that has outlived its usefulness and is living in the past?" In short, is the fraternity system keeping pace with the changing times?

What's Good About Them

Fraternities-and here we include the women's lodges as well as the men's- are "good" for the following reasons:

- ▼ They aid, often to the point of indispensibility, their respective universities in their problems of housing and organization. On many campuses fraternity houses comprise almost the entire dormitory system, in some cases without costing the institutions a cent. They help, because they are organized, their colleges to carry our innumerable programs that could never succeed on large campuses that sprawl without
- ▼ Without doubt they make for more diversihed and better executed social activities than would otherwise be possible, and they are capable of teaching even the most backward freshman the difference between a napkin and a bib.
- ▼ In numerous cases—especially in the larger universities-traternities play a major role in accliniating freshman and transfers, and in getting them through the orgies of registration and classification. This, obviously, is only the case at schools permitting first-week rushing. Gin jug. I wenties; these are the super-serious and on campuses where a majority of the newcomers are rushed.
- ▼ They give to students a "feeling of belonging," a thing which, though usually overconfidence, a knowledge that here is one place at least where he is wanted. And even the most cymcal must admit that the fraternity results

These, obviously, are assets, and were it not for the fact that there are certain things wrong with the system, and that it is these latter which are being revealed most openly to the public, then fraternities would have no cause for alarm.

What's Bad About Them

But because an appalling number of Greeks are too self-satisfied to be aware that there are things wrong, these conditions now exist:

- ▼ There has grown up a tendency to regard the fraternity as the all-important thing in college, with academics subordinated to the rank of a "sideline." Somehow or other, there seems to have arisen a belief among many that the Greek lodge is the very vaison d'etre for the university, and that one must not allow his "schoolwork to interfere with going to college."
- ▼ In a majority of cases, the national fraternity office approaches the status of the racker. becoming the tail that wags the dog-to the dog's disadvantage. Even in the better of the national-chapter relationships, one can hardly deny that the campus chapter gives much more
- to approach methods which are nearer fascism model this summer. "It'll take her its fourth year. Congratulations than democracy. This practice, which by every possible criterion should have died with the bell-bottom trousers and camoullaged Fords, is still being retained by and is still losing prestige for-auastounding number of campus chapters. # Cats Prep For W-L Generals After Narrow Xavier Victory

Muskies Fight, Lighting Blamed

Coach Kirwan's Kentucky Wildcats hit what baseballers might call slump Friday night as they defeated Xavler university's underrated, hard-driving little Musketeers counted for two six-pointers for the by a surprsingly narrow 13-0 victory.

Playing the first Kentucky night game since they tangled with a team from Xavier in 1936, the Wildcats pleked to knock off at least four touchdowns against Coach Crowe's trips to pay-dirt by two of their backs to gain the margin of victory counted for the Z Club's final two Jones Races 52 Yards

Midway in the opening quarter Junie Jones, speedy safety man and signal caller, received onc of Chet Mutryn's punts on the Xavier 48yard line. He stepped back, drew his would-be tacklers off balance and proceeded to race through the whole Rhineland crew for the Wildcats first score. His attempt at a conversion was wild

Dave Zoeller, husky and dependable senior halfback from New Albany, turned in the other Kentucky score. Late in the third frame he cut off his own right tackle, traveled about ten yards, then suddenly reversed his field and made contact with his blockers. From then on it was merely a matter of sprinting the required distance, for his teammates, blocking like Alabama in the Howell-Huston years, cleared away very obstaele in his path.

Greatest contribution to the 56and plans book and play reviews, yard touchdown trip was undoubtedly made by Jim Hardin, Zoeller's roommate and for the past eight One of the main functions of the years his teaminate, who made a brilliant purge of the last ambitious sports night, which is conducted Xavierite a few yards before the in the gym annex in cooperation hard-running halfback crossed the
